

In a packet switching apparatus capable of multicast, the length of a bitmap added to a multicast packet is made variable, depending on the number of line interface cards housed in the packet switching apparatus.